About the AAPT

The AAPT is dedicated to the advancement of the art of teaching philosophy. To this end the organization sponsors both a Newsletter and a Biennial Workshop/Conference on teaching philosophy. An AAPT-owned discussion forum, as well as blogs and teaching resources are available to AAPT members. You are encouraged to explore these pages and if you're interested in what you see and want to find out more, print a membership application and become a member.

About the IWCTP

The International Workshop-Conference on Teaching Philosophy (IWCTP) is a family-friendly 4 1/2-day conference for philosophy teachers at every educational level. We emphasize workshops that are practical and interactive, and that cover a wide range of subjects related to teaching. Concurrent with the IWCTP is a selective and highly popular teaching seminar for graduate students, co-sponsored with the American Philosophical Association. Special events during the conference include our famous wine and cheese reception, film series, conference banquet, and many other informal activities. Typically, we "take over" a local pub in the evenings so we can continue conversations and friendship-building. If you choose to join us at the upcoming conference, you'll discover why the American Association of Philosophy Teachers is known as one of the most friendly and inclusive professional organizations in philosophy!

The 18th Biennial IWCTP will be at Coastal Carolina University
Conway/Myrtle Beach, SC

July 29-August 2, 2010

Program and registration information will be posted here when available.
Please check back soon.
