This challenge to Modernization and economic progress raises crucial issues concerning cultural crisis²³ Multiple modernities²⁴, ecology²⁵ and Feminism²⁶, are now being addressed from the Confucian perspective by scholars worldwide. Actions that characterise humanitarianism include the preservation of ancient texts and languages, and natural resources, especially those upon which indigenous people depend on for survival, altruistic philosophy of helping others without something in return, sometimes referred to as volunteerism

Confucian humanism Confucians fought to keep the merchant class from influencing government, now: Moral decline in America is well documented and warnings of harvesting of resources by business enterprise or governments that destabilized the stability of indigenous populations. For example the American Indians, Mongolia
