In 2003 I graduated in Political Science at the University of Padua. In 2004 I applied to the PhD program in Economics and Management of the same University. During my PhD, I spent six months in Alicante (Spain) to work at the Laboratory for Theoretical and Experimental Economics and then I moved to the University of California Santa Barbara for one year with a scholarship of the Education Abroad Program. In March 2007 I defended my thesis on "Contract Theory, Other-regarding Preferences and Incentives" under the supervision of Prof. Antonio Nicolò. After my defense, Prof. Jean-Robert Tyran offered me a post-doc at the Economics Department of the University of Copenhagen. Here I had the possibility to improve my experience on experimental economics and to interact with the CEE group and its affiliates. In August 2010, I moved to Boston accepting the challenge to work in an exciting and demanding environment as HBS.
