

Interest prohibition and financial product innovation

J. A. Bergstra, C. A. Middelburg

(Submitted on 13 Apr 2011)

We give a rough sketch of the Judaic, Greek, Islamic and Christian positions in the matter of interest prohibition during the last few millennia and discuss the way in which interest prohibition is dealt with in Islamic finance, the problems with authority-based arguments for interest prohibition, and the prospects of interest prohibition with the advent of electronic money.
