Scientific and technical employment, 1990-2005

Douglas J. Braddock

Economist, Office of Employment Projections, Bureau of Labor Statistics

Alternative employment projections of scientists, engineers, and technicians indicate growth ranging widely—from 9 percent to 59 percent over the 1900-2005 period. This article summarizes the results of a BLS study on the employment prospects of scientific and technical workers, sponsored by the National Science Foundation's Division of Science Resource Studies.
