

High-level text at the top of the page, possibly containing a header or introductory information.

Main body of text, appearing as a dense block of characters and symbols.

Second main body of text, continuing the dense character-based content.

Third main body of text, showing further progression of the character-based content.

Final section of text at the bottom of the page, including some structured data or a footer.

