

the first time in history that the United States has been involved in a war of aggression against another country. The Japanese have shown a complete disregard for international law and justice. They have attacked a neutral nation without warning or provocation. This is a clear violation of the principles of the League of Nations and the United States must take immediate action to defend itself and its allies.

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor has brought the United States into a state of war. We must now decide whether we will fight to defend our freedom and our way of life, or whether we will allow ourselves to be dominated by a totalitarian regime. The choice is ours, and we must make it quickly.

We must also consider the long-term implications of this conflict. If we win, we will establish a new world order based on democracy, freedom, and justice. If we lose, we will be forced to live under a regime that values power over people. The outcome of this war will determine the fate of millions of people around the world.

As we stand here today, we must remember the words of President Franklin D. Roosevelt: "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself." Let us not let fear paralyze us, but rather let us use our strength and our determination to defend our country and our way of life. Let us stand together and fight for what is right.
