

Understanding Symmetric and Asymmetric DNA Patterns by Water Flow on a Solid Surface

LI Ding,^{1,2} FANG Hai-Ping,^{1,2} LEI Xiao-Ling,² WU Shi-Ying,² and AI Xiao-Bai²

¹ Surface Laboratory and Department of Physics, Fudan University, Shanghai 200433, China

² Shanghai Institute of Nuclear Research, the Chinese Academy of Sciences, P.O. Box 800-204, Shanghai 201800, China

(Received: 2002-4-9; Revised:)

Abstract: In order to use DNA for making molecular device, specific DNA patterns on a solid surface should be constructed. In this paper, we will show that the random interactions between the DNA segments and the solid surface play an important role in the final symmetric and asymmetric DNA patterns obtained by water flow.

PACS: 87.15.-Aa, 87.64.Dz

Key words: DNA pattern, random interaction

[\[Full text: PDF\]](#)

Close