DEDICATION

This thesis is dedicated to my son, Rodney, the one who's been there with me throughout my entire journey in pursuing higher education. I so appreciate the lifetime of support you have given me, especially through all the chaotic years spent juggling day-to-day life with the demands of completing university courses. But mostly, I have to express my overwhelming pride in you as one who approaches life with an unceasing sense of wonder and commitment to learning and personal growth - always with a humorous appreciation for the ironies life offers. I've been continuously blessed by the joy and inspiration you bring to my life, so it's fitting that I dedicate this work to you.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In completing my thesis it has been a very humbling experience to have had so many fine people invest themselves in helping me achieve this personal academic milestone. To Thom Upton, as my thesis advisor, you continually inspired me to strive to do my very best to produce a work for which I can genuinely be proud. I simply cannot thank you enough for your guidance and patience in making this process such an enriching, multi-faceted learning experience.

To Ulla Connor, likewise, your comments and suggestions were invaluable to me for this thesis. Furthermore, I thank you for all the insightful advice I received in your courses, which not only gave me confidence to pursue a Master of Arts degree, but solidly prepared me for the rigorous process of thesis writing.

Additionally, I want to express my wholehearted gratitude to Cathy Beck who has given me consistent support, critical direction, and unfailing words of good cheer and encouragement during this project - all well beyond the call of duty. Your enthusiasm and devotion to teaching ESL are beyond inspiring. Collectively, my thesis committee has demonstrated clearly what it means to teach in the spirit of commitment and helpfulness, and it is their model I hope to exemplify each time I enter a classroom.

I must also thank Melanie Curfman, not only for your capable administrative contributions, but for always welcoming me with an ever-cheerful demeanor each time I made my trek (sometimes anxiously) into the ESL Program office for thesis revisions.

Finally, a million thanks to my family for your support while working on this thesis. Especially, I thank my ever-patient and kind husband, who never failed to lavish me with encouragement during this entire project. Your support means the world to me.
